AMUSEMENTS.

REAPING THE HARVEST.—This most charming play, the success of the past three seasons, with beautiful and talented Julia Romaine and clever Tom Fitch, will be the attraction at the Grand, Tuesday evening, September 8. A play of rare human interest, a true to life picture of the world and its ways, is this novel and most fascinating stage story. Fun galore is woven into this great character play. Never in the history of the stage was there offered a play so skillfully placed. The author of this play has a style of his own. He gives you a moment of thought, and when the evening's entertainment is over you have been led through the field of comedy to one of the most powerful stories of human emotion ever given to the stage. The talented young actress, Julia Romaine, in that sweet, sympathetic character of "Louise Larken," is happily cast, and only for that reason is her name found upon the program. This charming actress loves the part of "Louise" as fondly as you love to see her play it, and that is why Julia Romaine, who is generally conceded the equal of Annie Russell, is found at the head of this company. Tom Fitch, the author, will play his own creation of careless "Donald Stewart."
